Rhino capture and translocation (only if it coincides with guests' stay and cannot be guaranteed).

INTRODUCTION

Some conservation efforts unfold quietly. Others reshape the future of an entire species. This experience offers rare behind-the-scenes access to one of the most significant wildlife restoration initiatives of our time.

In September 2023, African Parks assumed operational control of the world's largest captive rhino breeding project, home to 2,000 southern white rhino. Through the Rhino Rewild Initiative, African Parks aims to rewild these animals across suitable, secure protected areas in Africa within a decade.

A stay at the project offers an intimate window into the work taking place. Guests experience the rhythms of daily life on site, from the morning rhino roll call to supplementary feeding during the dry months. There may also be time spent with orphaned calves at the rhino nursery, depending on the animals present and their care requirements during the visit.

Guests may have the opportunity to photograph rhinos on foot under careful supervision. This combines close photographic access with respect for the animals, their welfare and the work taking place around them.

Nothing is staged for visitors. Guests step into the ongoing rhythm of the project and experience what unfolds during their time on the property. Each day is shaped by the activities taking place, creating opportunities to observe, photograph and better understand the care involved in preparing these rhinos for their return to protected landscapes.

Access to the experience is limited, allowing visits to take place without disrupting the daily work of the project or the welfare of the animals.

Your host knows the project site, its team and the work intimately, welcoming guests with insight and respect. Each day remains flexible and is shaped around the activities taking place and the interests of the guests, allowing the experience to unfold naturally.

YOUR GUIDE

MIKE DEXTER

FIELD GUIDE AND CONSERVATION PHOTOGRAPHER

Mike Dexter is a wildlife and conservation photographer and specialist photographic safari guide with over a decade of experience exploring Africa's most remote and breathtaking wilderness areas.

His journey began with a degree in photojournalism, where he honed his skills in visual storytelling. He later deepened his understanding of the natural world by earning a FGASA Level II guiding qualification and entering the wildlife industry as a full-time guide.

What truly sets Mike apart is his genuine passion for sharing the art of photography with others alongside a commitment to using imagery to support conservation. He thrives on helping guests push themselves, capture moments they never thought possible and create images that carry both artistic and conservation value. His patient and engaging teaching style ensures everyone is left feelinginspired and supported throughout.

Mike's work has been featured in numerous travel and wildlife publications reflecting both the beauty of the natural world and the importance of preserving it. For him photography goes beyond the final image, it's about telling stories that connect people to wild places and the challenges they face.

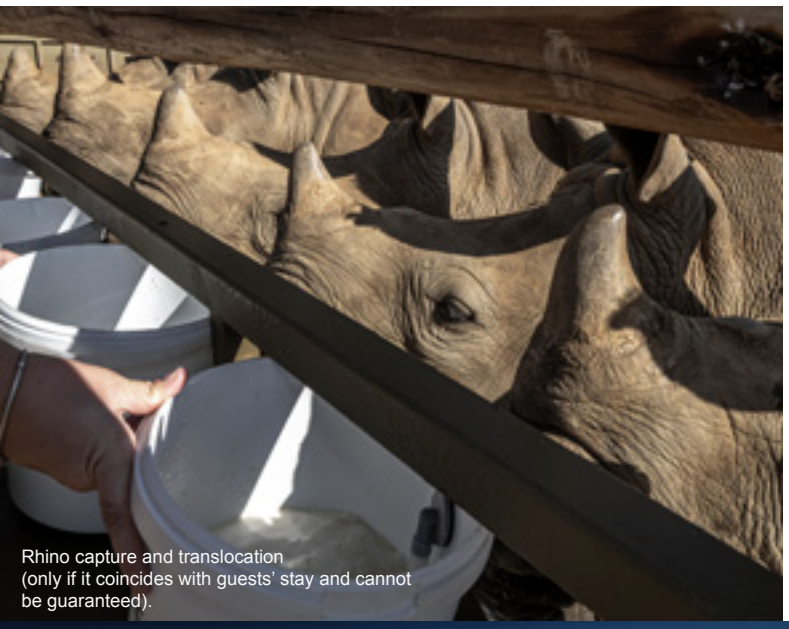

YOUR ACCOMODATION

AFRICAN PARKS CAPTURE CAMP

Opened in 2024, the camp consists of six safari-style tents, each with spacious ensuite bathrooms. The tents are equipped with fans but do not have air conditioning. The modern communal area features a large deck, a bar, a dining area, a small lounge, and a central fireplace. The deck overlooks a firepit and boma, which, in turn, overlooks a small waterhole that regularly attracts rhinos and buffalo.

The camp is situated on the edge of a stand of trees, providing shade, and it overlooks a wide open plain. The lounge and dining area are designed to facilitate relaxation and socializing.

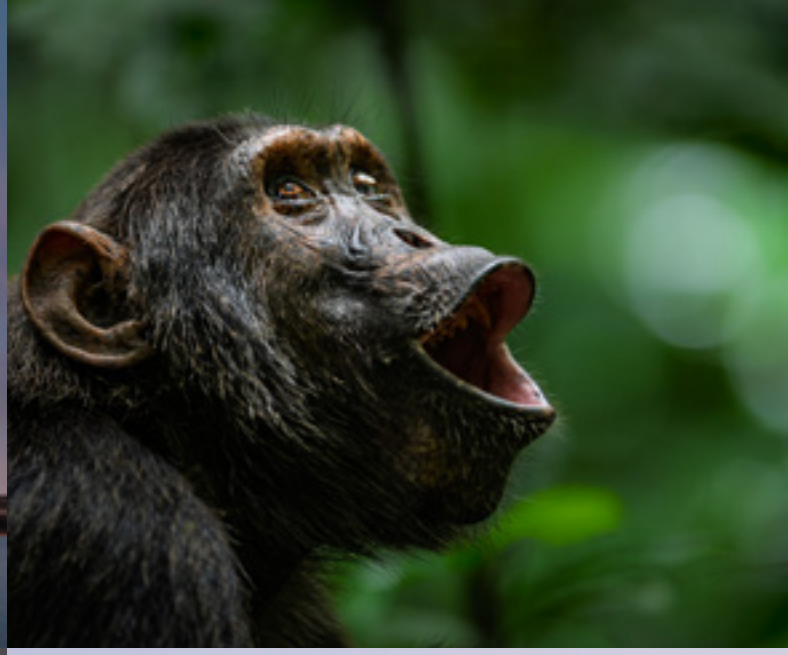

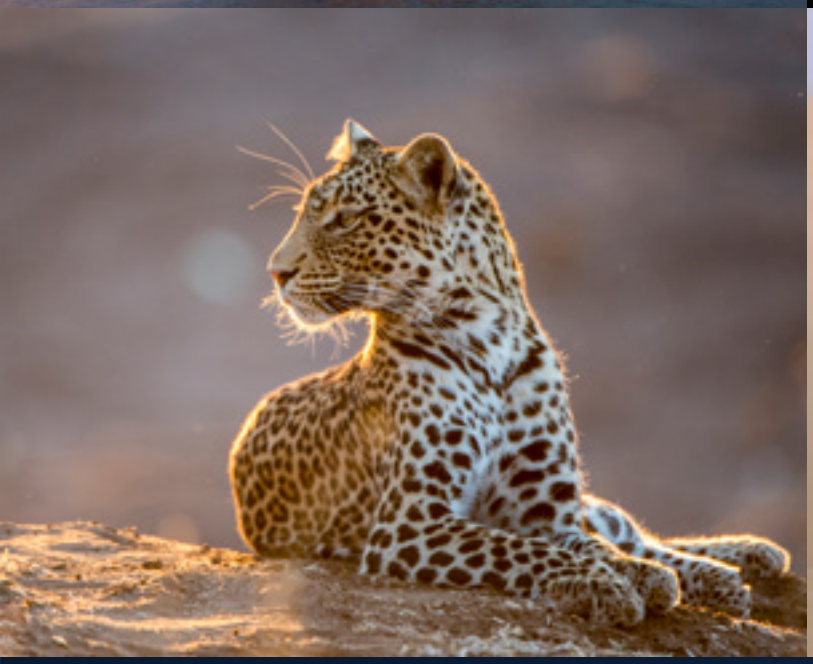

Rhino capture and translocation
